SCIENTIFIC RATIONALE

The hepatitis C virus still represents the main cause of chronic liver disease in our country. In this rapidly changing field, more and more drugs offer interesting treatment perspectives.

However, pros and cons of treatment of patients with advanced disease and tumor recurrence should be discussed, based on cost analysis and strong clinical evidence.

In Italy, till now, only patients with advanced fibrosis and cirrhosis have been treated and reimbursed; however new criteria have been recently approved. New treatment schedules and drugs, and new molecules in different clinical settings require a specific discussion. Moreover, other liver diseases, i.e. NASH, are becoming more and more prevalent and require proper attention.

The Meeting is targeted to specialists in Internal Medicine, Hepatology, Gastroenterology, and Infectious Diseases, aiming to provide them with the opportunity to interact with the Experts and discuss all the clinical issues of chronic hepatitis C and its complications.
